ABSTRACT

This study examined the benefits and costs of supported employment programs in Illinois during the first 2 years of operation. Benefits and costs were considered for 394 individuals enrolled in 1987 and 519 individuals enrolled in 1988, from three revenue perspectives: that of society as a whole; that of the supported employees; and that of the taxpayers. The study found that the total costs exceeded total benefits both from an overall societal perspective and from a taxpayer's perspective. The rise in the benefit-cost ratios from fiscal year 1987 to 1988 is attributed largely to savings in alternative program costs and not to increases in earnings. Expected increases in earnings during fiscal year 1988 occurred only for long-term supported employees. The increase in disposable income to supported employees as a whole was 37%. Program costs were higher for long-term supported employees during fiscal year 1988 than 1987, indicating that employee independence is not being promoted. Appendix A contains forms used to collect data from each program agency, including the Worker Characteristics Evaluation form, the Benefit-Costs Analysis, Job Coach/Coworker Involvement form, and Job Separation form. Appendix B contains raw data collected for 519 supported employees, such as hourly wages, hours worked, gross wages, taxes withheld, and benefit reduction. (22 references) (JDD)

The following principles guide our research related to the education and employment of youth and adults with specialized education, training, employment, and adjustment needs.

- Individuals have a basic right to be educated and to work in the environment that least restricts their right to learn and interact with other students and persons who are not handicapped.
- Individuals with varied abilities, social backgrounds, aptitudes, and learning styles must have equal access and opportunity to engage in education and work, and life-long learning.
- Educational experiences must be planned, delivered, and evaluated based upon the unique abilities, social backgrounds, and learning styles of the individual.
- Agencies, organizations, and individuals from a broad array of disciplines and professional fields must effectively and systematically coordinate their efforts to meet individual education and employment needs.
- Individuals grow and mature throughout their lives requiring varying levels and types of educational and employment support.
- The capability of an individual to obtain and hold meaningful and productive employment is important to the individual's quality of life.
- Parents, advocates, and friends form a vitally important social network that is an instrumental aspect of education, transition to employment, and continuing employment.

A Benefit-Cost Analysis of Supported Employment in Illinois: The First Two Years

Wendy B. McCaughrin, Frank R. Rusch, Ronald W. Conley, and Jeffrey Tines

Schneider, Rusch, Henderson, and Geske (1982) conducted one of the earliest benefit-cost analyses of supported employment. This was a study of the benefits and costs of one of the first supported employment programs in the United States, located in Illinois. Based on actual data collected from 1978 through 1980, Schneider et al. (1982) projected costs and benefits from 1981 through 1998. Although the costs of this early program initially exceeded the benefits, it was estimated that costs would gradually decrease, and benefits would increase and exceed costs by the eighth year of the program.

On the basis of actual data from the project, McCaughrin (1988) confirmed that costs in fact decreased and benefits increased over an eight-year period. She also found that the benefits exceeded costs by the fourth year, much earlier than originally anticipated.

These findings are consistent with the experience of supported employment in Virgina. Hill and Wehman (1983) reported that the benefits of supported employment began to exceed costs by the third year. Hill et al. (1987) continued this analysis over the next five years and found that benefits continued to exceed costs from the perspectives of the taxpayer and the supported employee. It follows that benefits must exceed costs from a social standpoint since social benefits are measured by the combined benefits of taxpayers and supported employees.

More recently, Tines, Rusch, McCaughrin, and Conley (1989) completed a benefit-cost analysis of supported employment programs in Illinois during their first year of operation. The Tines et al. (1989) study was made possible because a uniform, statewide data collection system was initiated and maintained by the investigators at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. As in the earlier study, they confirmed that costs exceeded benefits during the initial year of operation from the standpoint of society as a whole and of taxpayers. The supported employees, however, benefited financially as a result of the program.

On the basis of both theory and the evidence from earlier studies, we would anticipate that benefits would rise and costs fall for similar supported employment projects and that supported employment would soon become a wise investment for society. In this paper, we test these propositions by extending the benefit-cost analysis of supported employment projects in Illinois through their second year of operation (July 1, 1987 through June 30, 1988).

Method

Characteristics of Supported Employees

Between July 1, 1986 and June 30,1988 (FY1987 and FY1988), 588 individuals enrolled in 27 supported employment programs throughout Illinois. During FY1987, 394 individuals entered supported employment, with approximately 82% remaining in FY1988. Total enrollment during FY1988 was 519 individuals.

Table 1 summarizes the characteristics of the supported employees during the two-year period. The average age of these individuals was 31 years; 375 (64%) workers were male and 490 (83%) were white. Two hundred and seventy-three (46%) supported employees had mild mental retardation, 140 (24%) had disabilities in the moderate range, and 43 (7%) in the severe and profound range. The remaining 132 (22%) employees had other handicapping conditions.

Ten percent of the supported employees were referred from local special education programs, and 3% were referred from the community. Eighty percent came from alternative vocational programs provided by local adult service agencies. Three-fourths of these individuals came from

*Total = FY1988 workers + FY1987 terminated workers regular work and short-term work rehabilitation programs, and the remaining one-fourth came from adult day care and work activity programs. Although the original intent of supported employment was to provide services to individuals with characteristics similar to those in work activity programs (individuals with moderate and severe handicaps), the above percentages indicate that many individuals were served with characteristics similar to those found in regular work programs in sheltered workshops (individuals with mild handicaps).

Employees were placed in one of three placement models characteristic of supported employment in Illinois during this two-year period. Forty-three percent were placed in individual placements; 47% worked in clustered placements and 9% functioned in mobile work crews. Clustered placements consisted of a group of individuals working in the same general area on the same shift and performing work that was essentially interdependent, while individual placements enabled supported employees to work independently from one another in different locations.

Approximately 18% of the 394 workers participating in supported employment in Illinois were terminated during FY1987, and 15% of the 519 workers were terminated during FY1988. There were many reasons for termination including job layoffs due to lack of business by the employers and inappropriate social behavior by the employee on the job. Surprisingly there were no demographic differences between terminated workers and those who retained employment.

Data Sources

Data for this two-year benefit-cost analysis were obtained from several sources. The first source was the Illinois Supported Employment Program (ISEP) database developed and maintained by the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. ISEP collects individual worker data on a monthly basis from all participating local rehabilitation agencies who receive supported employment funds from Illinois.

The other sources of data were: (1) The Department of Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities (DMHDD) and The Department of Rehabilitation Services (DORS), which provided financial information on supported employment program costs as well as alternative program costs; (2) The Governor's Planning Council on Developmental Disabilities (Taylor Institute, 1988), which provided information on work and day activity programs in Illinois; (3) The Illinois branch of the U.S. Department of Labor, which provided earnings information for the remaining alternative vocational programs.

Benefits and Costs - Three Perspectives

Benefits and costs associated with supported employment were considered and analyzed from three revenue perspectives: that of society as a whole; that of the supported employees; and that of the taxpayers (see Table 2). The benefits and costs for supported employees and taxpayers sum to the benefits and costs of society as a whole. The taxpayers' perspective is particularly important because taxpayers provide almost all funds used for supported employment.

Societal perspective. From the perspective of society, the primary direct financial benefits of supported employment measured in this analysis consisted of increases in earnings resulting from employment plus decreases in the costs of alternative programs in which workers would have been enrolled had they not entered supported employment. There are, of course, other important benefits such as increased community integration and psychological gains; however, information was not available in these terms.

The costs of supported employment are those for program implementation (e.g., training, placement, and follow-up services) plus Targeted Jobs Tax Credits (TJTC) for employers.

Table 3 presents the gross wages earned by the 588 workers ($1,633,891) during the two-year period. The average number of months worked during this period was approximately 14.5 months.

[a] Referred to as Developmental Training in Illinois: individuals in Developmental Training I programs earn an average of $16.21 per month (Taylor Institute, 1988)

[b] Referred to as Developmental Training II in Illinois: individuals in Developmental Training II programs earn an average $36.13 per month (Taylor Institute, 1988).

[c] Regular work or extended employment earnings: Average hourly wage of $1.93 x average number of hours worked per week of 26 x 4 weeks.

[d] Work adjustment training earnings: Average hourly wage of $1.69 x average number of hours worked per week of 26 x 4 weeks.

[e] Skill training earnings: Average hourly wage of $1.69 x average number of hours per week of 26 x 4 weeks.

[f] Vocational development earnings: Average hourly wage of $1.56 x average number of hours worked per week of 26 x 4 weeks.

[g] Evaluation earnings: Average hourly wage of $1.56 x aproximate number of hours worked per week of 24 x 4 weeks.

[h] Transitional employment program earnings: Average hourly wage of $3.35 x average number of hours worked per week of 26 x 4 weeks.

[i] School, community, or other earnings are based on the average of the above programs. Individuals exiting schools or coming from the community, usually become part of some program and earn wages through local agencies.

Had these workers remained in the alternative, traditional programs, they would have earned a total of $1,003,395 for the same time period. Individuals were able to increase their earnings by $630,496 by participating in supported employment.

Savings in alternative program expenditures were an estimated $2,552,272 (See Table 4). They were estimated by identifying the alternative programs from which the individual workers exited, and then determining the amount per individual at which each program was reimbursed from federal and state funds as reported by each agency and where possible confirmed by DORS and DMHDD. An average of the above program costs was used for those individuals exiting from school, entering from the community or other setting, or whose previous location was not reported.

Supported employment program costs totaled $3,774,233 for the two-year period. Costs included federal and state monies received by each of the 27 rehabilitation agencies from Illinois DORS and DMHDD for supported employment and funds awarded to rehabilitation agencies from local funding agencies (e.g., Community Mental Health 708 Board). These monies were identified by examining the annual budgets of all agencies providing supported employment as well as DMHDD and DORS grant awards reports for FY87 and FY88. Communications with local agencies were used to supplement this information.

| TOTAL | | $ 975,075 | | $1,577,197 |

[a] Average monthly program cost for Adult Day Care was reported as approximately $377 during FY1987 and $395 during FY1988.

[b] Average monthly program cost for Work Activities Program was reported as approximately $363 during FY1987 and $377 during FY1988.

[c] Average monthly program cost for the Regular Work Program was reported as approximately $260 during FY1987 and $433 during FY1988.

[d] During FY1987, average monthly program costs for DORS were reported as $406 for Work Adjustment Training, $471 for Skill Training, $516 for Vocational Development, $472 for Evaluation and $615 for Transitional Employment. During FY1988, DORS reported that typical fees across these programs were $98.25 per week with less than 10% of all facilities receiving a higher amount. This is equivalent to approximately $425 per month for these programs in FY1988.

[e] There were 107 individuals who did not come from any of the above programs. Fifty-three individuals exited from secondary school programs. Fourteen individuals had just become clients in their local adult service agencies. Twenty-two individuals came from other placements, and 18 were unreported. If supported employment had not been available, they would most likely have been placed in one of the above alternative programs. Hence, an average of all alternative program costs was used.

Costs for the TJTC program totaled $85,613. The TJTC is a federal income tax credit of 40% of the first $6,000 earned by each eligible employee during his or her first year of employment and is credited against the employer's tax liability.

Supported employee perspective. From the perspective of the supported employees, the primary monetary benefit was the net increase in disposable income of $368,261 for the group, estimated by subtracting taxes withheld and decreases in government subsidies from the estimated increased earnings of the workers. Increased earnings were gross wages minus alternative earnings (see Table 3).

Total taxes withheld came to $212,486 for the two-year period and included federal and state income taxes as well as FICA (Social Security). For the majority of the 519 individuals, this was the first time in their lives that taxes had been withheld; taxes had not been withheld in their alternative placements.

Decreases in governmental subsidies were defined as any reductions in benefits received by participating individuals and amounted to $49,749. Governmental subsidies included Supplemental Security Income (SSI), Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI), Public Aid (PA) from the Illinois Department of Public Aid, Medicaid, and Aid to Dependent Children (ADC). Reductions were calculated for each individual by comparing monthly benefits received before entering supported employment with monthly benefits received while participating in supported employment.

Taxpayer perspective. The third perspective was that of the taxpayer. Benefits over the two-year period included $212,486 in taxes withheld by the 519 workers, a $49,749 reduction in government subsidies, and a $2,552,272 savings in operational expenditures for alternative programs. Costs were the same as from society's perspective. They included the cost of the supported employment program ($3,774,233) and a $85,613 reimbursement to employers through TJTC.

The Analysis. Once benefits and costs had been valued and aggregated from each perspective, net benefits and benefit/cost ratios were found for FY1987, FY1988, and the combined two-year period. Net benefits were calculated by subtracting costs from benefits,while benefit/cost ratios were calculated by dividing benefits by costs. If benefits were greater than costs, or if the benefit-cost ratio was greater than 1.00,then supported employment in Illinois would be considered to be economically efficient.

Results

Table 5 summarizes the benefits and costs from the perspectives of society, the supported employee,and the taxpayer for FY1987 and FY1988. Tables 6 and 7 summarize the data for FY1987 and FY1988 respectively.

Benefit-cost Analysis from Society's Perspective

Total societal benefits for the two-year period were $3,182,768 after adding the increase in earnings ($630,496) and the decrease in operational expenditures for alternative programs ($2,552,272). Total costs to society were $3,859,846 including supported employment program expenditures ($3,774,233) and TJTC credits ($85,613). Although total costs continued to exceed total benefits throughout the two-year period, net benefits decreased from -$414,265 during FY1987 to -$262,813 during FY1988. The overall benefit/cost ratio was 0.82 indicating that for every $1.00 spent, the return to society was $.82, for the two-year period.

If the benefit and cost data reported are converted to a per-person basis, net benefits per person from society's perspective decreased from a -$1,052 during FY1987 to a -$507 during FY1988. A benefit/cost ratio of 0.90 was found in FY1988 for the 312 long-term supported employees who began working during FY1987 for an average of 7.2 months and continued during FY1988 for an average of 8.6 months. Their increased earnings rose from $709 per person during FY1987 to $836 in FY1988. A benefit-cost ratio of 0.84 was found for the 207 short-term supported employees who began working during FY1988 for an average of 5.3 months (see Table 8).

Supported employment program costs averaged $4,863 for long-term workers and $3,017 for short-term workers during FY1988. An average monthly cost ($565) was used for both groups and prorated to reflect the number of months worked by long-term and short-term workers because costs for individual workers were not available in program agency expense reports. An average monthly cost across supported employees was also considered appropriate for FY1988 because Johnson and Rusch (1989) found very little difference in the number of hours of direct training provided to supported employees over six and twelve months.

Benefit-cost analysis from the employee's perspective

Because employees assumed none of the operational costs of the program, their net benefits were equivalent to the net increase in their earnings ($368,261). Net employee income was derived by subtracting their lost sheltered earnings of $1,003,395, their taxes withheld of $212,486, and their lost government subsidies of $49,749 from their gross wages of $1,633,891. During FY1987, each supported employee earned approximately $1,785 for 7.2 months of work. Net income increase over the previous vocational placement was approximately $393 for this same time period. During FY1988, s/he earned approximately $1,793 for 7.3 months of work with a net increase of approximately $411 over earnings from his/her previous vocational placement. Long-term supported employees (i.e., those who began during FY1987) earned an average of $2,152 during FY1988 for 8.6 months of work, with a net increase of approximately $491 over earnings from their previous vocational placement, while short-term supported employees earned an average of $1,252 for 5.3 months of work, with a net increase of about $290 (see Table 9).

Benefit-Cost Analysis from the Taxpayer's Perspective

As the major funding group, taxpayers bore most of the cost of the supported employment programs. Total benefits to the taxpayer were $2,814,507 which included taxes withheld ($212,486), savings in public benefits (49,749) and decreases in alternative program costs ($2,552,272). Total costs to the taxpayer of $3,859,846 were calculated by adding the supported employment program expenditures of $3,774,233 and the TJTC credits of $85,613. While total costs exceeded total benefits, net benefits decreased from minus $569,082 in FY1987 to minus $476,257 in FY1988. The overall benefit/cost ratio was 0.73 indicating that for every $1 spent, the return to the taxpayer was $.73 for the two-year period.

*312 long-term supported employees who began working during FY1987 and continued during FY1988; 207 short-term workers began working in FY1988.

The excess of costs over benefits decreased from $1,445 per person in FY1987 to $918 in FY1988 (see Table 10). Although the long-term employee paid $62 more in taxes and received $18 less in public benefits than the average worker during FY1988, the average cost per employee of the supported employment program was $736 more.

Discussion

The purpose of this study was to examine the benefits and costs of supported employment programs in Illinois during their first two years of operation. The first and most obvious observation is that total costs exceeded total benefits both from an overall societal perspective and from a taxpayer's perspective. From a societal perspective, for each $1 invested, the return to society was $.75 in FY1987 and $.88 in FY1988, with an average return of $.82 for the combined two-year period. Similarly, from a taxpayer's perspective, for every $1 invested, the return was $.66 during FY1987 and $.78 during FY1988, with an average of $.73 over the two-year period.

A second observation is that the rise in the benefit-cost ratios can be attributed largely to savings in alternative program costs and not to increases in earnings as predicted. This does not mean that the benefit-cost ratios are erroneous. Regarding these savings as a benefit is justified because the supported employees would in almost all cases be placed in alternative programs in the absence of supported employment, and not left in idleness. However, it does show that the improvement in the benefit-cost ratio cannot be attributed to greater efficiency or proficiency on the part of supported employment programs, but to an extraneous rise in the costs of operating alternative programs.

The third observation is that the expected increase in earnings during FY1988 occurred only for long-term supported employees who began working during FY1987. This is consistent with predictions that earnings would increase as supported employees gained proficiency and experience.

The fourth observation is that the net gain to the supported employee, that is, the increase in disposable income after taxes and reductions in public payments have been taken into account, amounted to $393 in 1987 and rose to $411 in 1988 for all supported employees and to $491 for long-term employees. If the group is considered as a whole, the increase in disposable income was made possible only because reductions due to tax collections and reductions in public payments fell from $316 per supported employee in FY1987 to $265 in FY1988. But if only long-term supported employees are considered, the increase in disposable income was due to greater earnings because reductions rose from $316 per supported employee in FY1987 to $345 in FY1988. Although the increase in disposable income appears meager, approximately $60 per month, this increase represented a significant percentage increase of disposable income amounting to at least 37% in both FY1987 and FY1988 for the supported employees as a whole.

The fifth observation is that supported employment program costs were higher for long-term supported employees during FY1988. Costs were based on prorating the average monthly cost because there was no evidence to show that long-term workers were receiving less direct training than short-term workers (Johnson & Rusch, 1989). These findings suggest that employee independence is not being promoted, an issue that needs to be addressed if greater program efficiency is to be achieved.

The sixth observation is that supported employment is growing rapidly. Three hundred and ninety-four individuals were enrolled in 1987, and 519 individuals were enrolled in 1988, which supports Wehman et al.'s (1987) findings that enrollment is increasing nationwide.

Although these initial results in Illinois do not yet indicate a positive benefit-cost ratio, it is anticipated that supported employment will eventually prove to be cost beneficial for many clients, that is, a program superior to placement in a sheltered workshop, work activity center, or adult day program. As noted, there is some empirical evidence to support this prediction.

Nevertheless, despite this optimism about the future of supported employment, it is clear that this is a young program that needs to evolve so that it becomes more effective and better able to serve clients with a wide diversity of needs.

The continued use of large databases, such as the one developed at the University of Illinois are necessary to provide the rigorous and comprehensive longitudinal information regarding the efficiency and effectiveness of supported employment. The data included in this paper represent a beginning of the task of understanding the value of supported employment programs.

Additional analyses will be needed in areas such as: the earnings and cost of supported employees after two, three, and even more years; changes in factors associated with earnings such as hourly earnings, hours worked, availability of fringe benefits such as health insurance; and program procedures that are most effective for different groups of clients. This information will not only assist in monitoring program effectiveness, but it is crucial to the delivery of technical assistance to supported employment agencies so that they may improve their programs.

If supported employment is to continue to receive widespread support, it must demonstrate its efficiency and effectiveness as an alternative to more traditional vocational programs for individuals with severe disabilities. As funding agencies are being forced to discriminate more carefully than ever among programs (Wehman, 1986), preferred programs are usually those demonstrating the greatest effectiveness and efficiency (Conley, 1973; Rossi & Freeman, 1985).

The evaluation forms used to collect data from each program agency participating in ISEP during FY1988 have been included. Initial information on each new client was collected using the Worker Characteristics Evaluation form. Monthly data on clients were collected using the Benefit-Cost Analysis and Job Coach/Coworker Involvement forms. Follow-up information on workers no longer receiving supported employment services was collected using the Job Separation form.

4.0 COWORKER INVOLVEMENT- (Please check all types of coworker involvement that take place at the target employee's worksite)

4.1 ______ Training - Coworkers support target employee(s) by providing on-the-job training.

4.2 ______ Associating - Coworkers associate with target employee(s) by either conversing with them during breaks or eating lunch with them.

4.3 ______ Befriending - Coworkers interact socially with target employee(s) outside of the work place.

4.4 ______ Advocating - Coworkers advocate for target employee(s) by supporting and protecting the target employee's rights.

4.5 ______ Data collecting - Coworkers collect data by observing and recording a range of social and work behaviors, including production rate and social behavior.

4.6 ______ Evaluating - Coworkers evaluate the target employee's performance by providing written or verbal feedback.

4.7 ______ When the target employee is at work, how many nonhandicapped coworkers do tasks similar to those performed by the target employee?

4.8 ______ When the target employee is at work, how many nonhandicapped coworkers work in the same area at the same time with the target employee?

4.9 1 2 3 4 How would you rate the target employee's opportunity to interact with nonhandicapped coworkers?
(Circle One)

4. High - There are many opportunities for the target employee to interact with nonhandicapped coworkers because they work in the immediate work area (within 10 square feet), in the same room, or come in frequent contact.

3. Moderate - There are some opportunities for the target employee to interact with nonhandicapped coworkers - they periodically come in contact during work or breaks, even though they work in different areas, i.e., they are separated by more than a ten square foot area or work in separate rooms.

2. Low - There are few opportunities for the target employee to interact with nonhandicapped coworkers because they do not work together and they do not take their breaks at the same time.

1. Nonexistent - There are no opportunities for the target employee to interact with nonhandicapped coworkers because there are no coworkers in the same work area, they do not take breaks together, or they work a shift when no one else works.

5.0 COMMENTS (Please provide any additional comments about coworker involvement with the target employee that you feel are unique to your worksite(s).

Appendix B

The remaining information consists of raw data collected for each of the 519 supported employees during FY1988 using the forms found in Appendix A. This includes hourly wages, hours worked, gross wages, taxes withheld, and benefit reduction for each month a worker participated in ISEP during FY1988.

The raw data for FY1988 were based on the monthly reports submitted by each agency for each supported employee. If any entry was missing on the monthly report, or considered to be inaccurate, ISEP staff members made every effort to correct inaccurate or missing data by contacting agencies and double-checking the monthly report with the agency in question. It was not possible to make corrections in every instance.

The FY1987 worker raw data can be found in Tines, J., Rusch, F.R., and McCaughrin, W.B. (1989). Supported Employment in Illinois: Benefits versus Costs, (Vol. 5). University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.
